

Push Notification Strategy

NG Slots - Proposal for Approval

Prepared by Melleka Marketing

The opportunity

NG Slots already sends push notifications at real scale - roughly 25 million sends over the last 90 days across hundreds of campaigns. The delivery infrastructure is solid and the sending routine is consistent. The opportunity is in how those messages are targeted, written, and timed.

Today, every campaign goes to a broad audience with the same general message at the same time of day. As a result, of the notifications that reach a device, roughly 0.5% are opened. For reference, social casino apps typically see push open rates in the 3-8% range. Closing even part of that gap would meaningfully increase daily active players - at no additional ad spend, since push is a channel NG Slots already owns.

This document lays out a redesigned push strategy built around player behavior, together with a library of sample campaign messages the team can draw from across the full player lifecycle.

Where things stand today

Looking at the current push performance, three patterns stand out - each one an opportunity rather than a problem:

- One audience for everyone. Messages are sent broadly rather than tailored to where a player is in their journey - a brand-new player and a player who hasn't opened the app in two weeks receive the same message.
- Generic wording. Current copy leans on general phrasing (for example, "Something good might land") rather than a specific, concrete reason to open right now.
- Fixed timing. Most messages fire at the same one or two times each day, rather than when each player is most likely to be active.

None of these require new technology - they're strategy and content changes we can make within the tools already in place.

Our proposed approach

1. Speak to players based on their behavior

Instead of one message for everyone, we'll group players into lifecycle segments and tailor the message to each. A first draft of those segments:

Segment	Who they are	Goal
New / Onboarding	Installed in the last 7 days	Build the daily-return habit
Active Core	Played in the last 48 hours	Deepen engagement, don't over-message
At-Risk	Last active 3–7 days ago	Win them back before they churn
Lapsed	Last active 8–30 days ago	Reactivate with a strong offer
Deep Dormant	Inactive 30+ days	Occasional big-swing reactivation
Spenders / VIP	Have made in-app purchases	Exclusive treatment, protect the relationship

2. Give players a concrete reason to open

Every message will carry at least one of these, which the current messages generally don't:

- Specificity - a real number or countdown, not “something good”
- Personalization - the player's name, balance, streak, or favorite game where available
- Urgency - a genuine deadline (“ends in 3 hours”)
- Ownership - a reward that is theirs and waiting to be claimed

3. Send less to some, better to all

We'll set sensible frequency caps by segment (for example, highly active players don't need constant reminders, while lapsed players warrant a lighter touch) and move toward per-player send-time optimization instead of fixed 9am / 9pm slots. The goal is fewer wasted notifications and more that land at the right moment.

A note on compliance

All copy stays firmly within social-casino guidelines - no real-money, cash-win, or payout language of any kind. Everything is framed around coins, spins, and entertainment, in keeping with app-store and advertising-platform policies.

Sample notification copy

Please note: the examples below are illustrative. Some reference features such as daily-bonus timers, tournaments, or VIP tiers. We'll confirm which mechanics NG Slots actually offers and keep only the copy that fits the real game. Items in braces (for example, {coin balance}) are personalization fields we'll use only where that data is available.
